

Contents

|                                                             |           |
|-------------------------------------------------------------|-----------|
| List of Tables, Portraits, Figures and Illustrations | xv        |
| Preface                                              | xvii      |
| Acknowledgements                                     | xx        |
| Chronology of Key Events, 1775–1914                  | xxi       |
| List of Prime Ministers, 1783–1916                   | xxiii     |
|                                                         |           |
| 1 The Eighteenth-Century Background                  | 1  |
| Introduction                                                | 1         |
| Key issues                                                  | 1         |
| 1.1 Society and state in the eighteenth century             | 2         |
| 1.2 Political and religious tensions                        | 5         |
| 1.3 Towards the Industrial Revolution                       | 7         |
| 1.4 Challenges and political failure                        | 10        |
| 1.5 Conclusion                                              | 13        |
| Summary                                                     | 14        |
| Points to discuss                                           | 14        |
| References and further reading                              | 14        |
|                                                         |           |
| 2 The Industrial Revolution 1: 1750–1850             | 15 |
| Introduction                                                | 15        |
| Key issues                                                  | 15        |
| 2.1 Coal                                                    | 16        |
| 2.2 Iron                                                    | 17        |
| 2.3 Technology                                              | 18        |
| 2.4 Sectors of expansion                                    | 19        |
| 2.5 Textiles                                                | 19        |
| 2.6 The British economy                                     | 22        |
| 2.7 Conclusion                                              | 24        |

|          |                                       |            |
|----------|---------------------------------------|------------|
| 7.6      | Working-class culture                 | 113        |
| 7.7      | Protest and protection                | 119        |
| 7.8      | Credit and debt                       | 120        |
| 7.9      | Conclusion                            | 122        |
|          | Summary                               | 122        |
|          | Points to discuss                     | 123        |
|          | References and further reading        | 123        |
| 8 | The Political World to 1851    | 125 |
|          | Introduction                          | 125        |
|          | Key issues                            | 126        |
| 8.1      | Politics, society and revolution      | 126        |
| 8.2      | Economic and social pressures         | 130        |
| 8.3      | Pressure for political change         | 134        |
| 8.4      | Chartism                              | 140        |
| 8.5      | Conclusion                            | 144        |
|          | Summary                               | 145        |
|          | Points to discuss                     | 145        |
|          | References and further reading        | 145        |
| 9 | The Political World after 1851 | 147 |
|          | Introduction                          | 147        |
|          | Key issues                            | 147        |
| 9.1      | Regulation and containment            | 147        |
| 9.2      | Environmental regulation              | 149        |
| 9.3      | A new world of politics               | 149        |
| 9.4      | The nature of power within society    | 151        |
| 9.5      | Change and reform                     | 154        |
| 9.6      | Electoral politics after 1885         | 159        |
| 9.7      | Conclusion                            | 165        |
|          | Summary                               | 165        |
|          | Points to discuss                     | 165        |
|          | References and further reading        | 166        |

|                                                             |            |
|-------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 10 Ireland and the Irish Question                    | 167 |
| Introduction                                                | 167        |
| Key issues                                                  | 167        |
| 10.1 Economy and society                                    | 168        |
| 10.2 From Union to Famine: Britain and Ireland              | 177        |
| 10.3 The constitutional fight for home rule, 1870s–1914     | 181        |
| 10.4 A long coda to the nineteenth-century ‘Irish Question’ | 184        |
| 10.5 Conclusion                                             | 188        |
| Summary                                                     | 189        |
| Points to discuss                                           | 189        |
| References and further reading                              | 190        |
| 11 Wales and Scotland                                | 191 |
| Introduction                                                | 191        |
| Key issues                                                  | 192        |
| 11.1 Contexts                                               | 192        |
| 11.2 Culture and society                                    | 193        |
| 11.3 Industry and empire                                    | 200        |
| 11.4 Conclusion                                             | 204        |
| Summary                                                     | 204        |
| Points to discuss                                           | 205        |
| References and further reading                              | 205        |
| 12 Britain and the Wider World: 1                    | 207 |
| Introduction                                                | 207        |
| Key issues                                                  | 207        |
| 12.1 Eighteenth-century parallels                           | 207        |
| 12.2 Xenophobia and cosmopolitanism                         | 208        |
| 12.3 Britain and the challenges of the French Revolution    | 210        |
| 12.4 Imperial Britain                                       | 215        |
| 12.5 Conclusion                                             | 219        |
| Summary                                                     | 220        |
| Points to discuss                                           | 220        |
| References and further reading                              | 220        |

|                                                                 |            |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| 13 Britain and the Wider World: 2                        | 221 |
| Introduction                                                    | 221        |
| Key issues                                                      | 221        |
| 13.1 Empire and free trade                                      | 222        |
| 13.2 Continental links                                          | 226        |
| 13.3 Cultural links                                             | 227        |
| 13.4 Political concerns                                         | 230        |
| 13.5 Nationalism and Xenophobia                                 | 231        |
| 13.6 The challenge of European rivals, 1870–1914                | 236        |
| 13.7 Britain and the Continent before the First World War       | 239        |
| 13.8 Conclusion                                                 | 242        |
| Summary                                                         | 243        |
| Points to discuss                                               | 243        |
| References and further reading                                  | 243        |
| 14 Women                                                 | 244 |
| Introduction                                                    | 244        |
| Key issues                                                      | 245        |
| 14.1 Working-class women and their ‘communities’                | 245        |
| 14.2 Women at work                                              | 250        |
| 14.3 Women, citizenship and the struggle for political equality | 253        |
| 14.4 Conclusion                                                 | 256        |
| Summary                                                         | 257        |
| Points to discuss                                               | 257        |
| References and further reading                                  | 257        |
| 15 Morality, Sexuality and ‘Victorian Values’            | 259 |
| Introduction                                                    | 259        |
| Key issues                                                      | 260        |
| 15.1 Society and the individual                                 | 260        |
| 15.2 Men, women and morality                                    | 266        |
| 15.3 Sexuality and love                                         | 270        |

|                                     |            |
|-------------------------------------|------------|
| 15.4 Art and sexuality              | 273        |
| 15.5 Conclusion                     | 274        |
| Summary                             | 274        |
| Points to discuss                   | 275        |
| References and further reading      | 275        |
| 16 Religion and Belief       | 276 |
| Introduction                        | 276        |
| Key issues                          | 276        |
| 16.1 The nature of religion         | 277        |
| 16.2 Conformity and diversity       | 279        |
| 16.3 The Victorian crisis of faith? | 283        |
| 16.4 Churches for the urban world   | 294        |
| 16.5 Conclusion                     | 297        |
| Summary                             | 298        |
| Points to discuss                   | 298        |
| References and further reading      | 298        |
| 17 Cultural Trends           | 300 |
| Introduction                        | 300        |
| Key issues                          | 300        |
| 17.1 The triumphant marketplace     | 301        |
| 17.2 The novelists' Britain         | 302        |
| 17.3 Poetry                         | 305        |
| 17.4 Drama                          | 307        |
| 17.5 Music Hall                     | 309        |
| 17.6 Architecture                   | 310        |
| 17.7 Painting                       | 312        |
| 17.8 Music                          | 315        |
| 17.9 Conclusion                     | 316        |
| Summary                             | 317        |
| Points to discuss                   | 317        |
| References and further reading      | 317        |

|                                      |            |
|--------------------------------------|------------|
| 18 Into the Twentieth Century | 319 |
| Introduction                         | 319        |
| Key issues                           | 319        |
| 18.1 A new political world?          | 319        |
| 18.2 A society under strain?         | 324        |
| 18.3 A new culture?                  | 326        |
| Summary                              | 327        |
| Point to discuss                     | 327        |
| References and further reading       | 328        |
| 19 Conclusions                | 329 |
| Introduction                         | 329        |
| Key issues                           | 330        |
| 19.1 Local activism and progress     | 330        |
| 19.2 A national political culture?   | 330        |
| 19.3 The ambiguities of reform?      | 331        |
| Summary                              | 334        |
| Points to discuss                    | 334        |
| References and further reading       | 334        |
| Bibliography                  | 335        |
| Index                         | 337        |