

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: Twenty-First-Century British Fiction and the City	1
	Magali Cornier Michael
2	“Why Should You Go Out?”: Encountering the City in Monica Ali’s Brick Lane	15
	Nick Bentley
3	The Cosmopolitan Potential of Urban England?: Jon McGregor’s If Nobody Speaks of Remarkable Things	35
	Magali Cornier Michael
4	“We Exist Only in the Reflection of Others”: Imagining London’s History in Bernardine Evaristo’s The Emperor’s Babe	61
	Nicola Allen
5	Gated Communities and Dystopia in J.G. Ballard’s Super-Cannes	81
	Francesco Di Bernardo

6	Celetoids and the City: Tabloidization of the Working Class in Zadie Smith's White Teeth and Martin Amis' Lionel Asbo: State of England	103
	Megan Faragher
7	Belonging and Un-belonging in London: Representations of Home in Diana Evans' 26a	131
	Katie Danaher
8	Between Urban Ecology and Social Construction: Environment and the Ethics of Representation in Zadie Smith's NW	155
	John Hadlock
9	The Queer Gothic Spaces of Contemporary Glasgow: Louise Welsh's The Cutting Room	181
	Emily Horton
10	Convulsions of the Local: Contemporary British Psychogeographical Fiction	205
	Ella Mudie
11	Trauma, Negativities, and the City in Trezza Azzopardi's Remember Me	233
	Philip Tew
	Index	249