

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	page ix
1 Introduction	1
The English Reformation and the Protestant Devil	1
The historiography of the Devil	8
The Devil and 'the persecuting society': witches, Puritanism and despair	12
2 The synagogue of Satan: anti-Catholicism, false doctrine and the construction of contrariety	27
The Devil as fact: the Protestant perception of diabolic power	28
The Devil's church: the construction of contrariety	41
3 Temptation: the Protestant dynamic of diabolic agency and the resurgence of clerical mediation	60
Liturgy, theology and conduct literature	62
Resisting Satan: prayer and dialogue	83
The Protestant ministry and the mediation of resistance	95
4 Satan and the godly in early modern England	107
The context of demonism and models of temptation	108
Cyclical affliction and spiritual progression: the experience and rationalisation of temptation	118
Diabolic affliction and godly community	135
5 Incarnate devils: crime narratives, demonisation and audience empathy	142
Reporting Satan's agency: crime and the pulp press	144
Components of the Devil's kingdom	150
Devilish humans and audience empathy	153
Temptation and the physical Devil	170

6	'What concord hath Christ with Belial?': de facto satanism and the temptation of the body politic, 1570-1640	175
	The Elizabethan religious controversies and the concept of de facto satanism	177
	The divine monarch and the Devil: Elizabeth I, James I and Catholic treachery	184
	The divine Charles and the Devil: diabolic subversion and the language of political opposition	196
7	'Grand Pluto's Progress through Great Britaine': the Civil War and the zenith of satanic politics	213
	'Sworne Sword-men of the devill': diabolic service in parliamentary propaganda	217
	'Hell's Black Parliament': demonism, rebellion and diabolic government in royalist propaganda	236
8	'The Devil's Alpha and Omega': temptation at the cutting edge of faith in the Civil War and the Interregnum	250
	The synagogue of Satan revisited: the Devil turned Independent	253
	The interpretation of sectarianism in the 1650s	265
	Conclusion	286
	Bibliography	294
	Index	326