
Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
1 Introduction by Julia Swindells	1
2 Theories of Autobiography Part one by Laura Marcus: The face of autobiography Part two by Jane Unsworth: Why does an author who apparently draws so much on autobiography seem committed to 'alienating' the reader? A reflection on theories of autobiography with reference to the work of Janet Frame	13 24
3 Gender, Militancy and Wartime Part one by Maroula Joannou: 'She who would be politically free herself must strike the blow': Suffragette autobiography and suffragette militancy Part two by Margaretta Jolly: 'Dear Laughing Motorbyke': Gender and genre in women's letters from the Second World War	31 45
4 Making Sense of the Self: Cultural Identities Under Pressure Part one by Clare Blake: A strategy for survival Part two by David Whitley: Cultural identities under pressure	56 64
5 Constructing the Self, Inventing Africa Part one by Cheryl-Ann Michael: Gender and iconography in auto/biographies of Nelson and Winnie Mandela Part two by Ato Quayson: Memory, history and 'faction' in Wole Soyinka's Aké and Isara	73 81

6	Autobiography, Authenticity and Nineteenth-century Ideas of Race
	Part one by Sarah Meer: Sentimentality and the slave narrative: Frederick Douglass' My Bondage and My Freedom	89
	Part two by Nadia Valman: Speculating upon human feeling: Evangelical writing and Anglo-Jewish women's autobiography	98
7	Sisterhood and Self-censorship in the Nineteenth Century
	Part one by Janet Bottoms: Writing herself: the diary of Alice James	110
	Part two by Pam Hirsch: Gender negotiations in nineteenth-century women's autobiographical writing	120
8	The Educative 'I' in Nineteenth-century Women's Autobiographies
	Part one by Ruth A. Symes: Catharine Cappe of York (1822)	128
	Part two by Brian Ridgers: 'What I earnestly longed for ...': Elizabeth Missing Sewell, writing, autobiography and Victorian womanhood	138
9	Autobiography and Educational Change
	'I wanted to nurse. Father wanted teachers.' by Bobbie Wells and Peter Cunningham	151
10	Life Histories, Adult Learning and Identity
	Part one by Alistair Thomson: Writing about learning: Using Mass-Observation educational life-histories to explore learning through life	163
	Part two by Mary Lea and Linden West: Motives, mature students, the self and narrative	177
11	Assumed Identities: Feminism, Autobiography and Performance Art
	by Claire MacDonald	187
12	There are stories and Stories: An Autobiography Workshop
	by Gillie Bolton and Morag Styles	196
13	Conclusion: Autobiography and the Politics of 'The Personal'
	by Julia Swindells	205
	Contributors	215
	Index	219