

Contents

Tables and Figures

Acknowledgements

1 Introduction

Setting the Scene: Misplaced Expectations

‘What Have I Been Doing for the Last Five Years?’

For Learners and Teacher: Introducing Research

Complexity in the Classroom

Giving Voice to Motivation

How to Read this Book

Part 1: Growth: A Research Narrative

2 Groundings from Foreign Language Learning Motivation Research in Japan

Japanese EFL Learning and (De)motivation

The Influence of Recognition of Relevance and Interest

The Influence of Understandings of an ‘English-using Self’

The Influence of Perceptions of Competence

The Influence of Classroom Language Lessons

Moving on

3 A Move to Socio-dynamic Motivation

The Theory of Possible Selves

The L2 Motivational Self System

Applications of Possible-self Theory

Moving on

4 Research Design

Action Research

Initial Philosophical Considerations

Philosophical Underpinnings of Complex Systems Theory

Action Research and a Complex Systems Philosophy

Design and Context of the Study

Data Collection Methods: Introspective Tools

Data Analysis During the Action Research

5 Action Research Narrative

Cycle 1. Sowing Seeds: April

Cycle 2. Tentative Beginnings: April–May

Cycle 3. A Puzzling Outcome: June–September

Cycle 4. Delving Deeper: September–November

Cycle 5. New Directions: December–February

Moving on

Part 2: Re-viewing

6 Revisiting Complex Systems Theory

Features of Complex Systems

Approaching Education from a Complex Systems Perspective

Complex Systems Theory in Language Learning

Moving on

7 Class Group as Open System

Past Experiences and Initial Ideas of an Ideal Self

Transportable Identities

Absorbed Expectations

Prosaic Contextual Influences

Reflecting on Openness

8Co-adaptation Between Self and Environment

Nested Motivational States Related to English Use

Nested Motivational States Related to Interaction

Nested Motivational States Related to Realisations

Reflecting on Co-adaptation in State Space

9Motivational Phase-shifts and Self-organisation Across the Class Group

Phase-shifts Related to Transitions

Self-organisation: Fostering Communication

Reflecting on Functional Pattern-building: The Self-organising Whole and Parts

10Novel Motivational Emergence in the Class Group

An Emergent Motivational Outcome

Identifying Interactions in the Context of Emergence

Reflecting on Conditions of Emergence During this Project

Part 3: Reciprocity

11The Landscape of Classroom Motivation

Individualised, Dynamic English-using Self Ideas

Complex Systems Theory and the Importance of Interactions in Classroom Motivation

12Conclusion and Iteration

What Do Students Gain from EFL Lessons?

Intervening in the Possible-selves of Students

Reflecting on Action Research

Representing Research as Voiced Experience

Future Directions

Iteration

Appendix A: Overview of English Course

Appendix B: Learning Journal Instructions

Appendix C: Outline of Sessions in Action Research Cycles

Appendix D: Change-action in Cycle 1

Appendix E: Change-action in Cycle 3

Appendix F: Change-action in Cycle 4

Appendix G: Change-action in Cycle 5

Appendix H: Outline of Final Infomercial Project

Glossary

References

Index